Authors

Moritz Hennemann is a Full University Professor, holding the Chair of European and International Information Law, University of Passau Law Faculty since 2020. His research focuses on private law, business law, data law, media law, and information law, including from a comparative perspective. He holds degrees in law from the Universities of Heidelberg (2009), Oxford (M.Jur., 2011), and Freiburg (Dr. jur., 2011). He was a postdoctoral researcher at the University of Freiburg (Habilitation, 2019), a visiting researcher at Harvard Law School and an affiliate to the Berkman Klein Center for Internet & Society, Harvard Law School.

Gregor Lienemann is an academic research assistant and doctoral candidate in law at the Chair of European and International Information Law, University of Passau Law Faculty since 2021. His research focuses on data portability and on the intersection of data protection and competition law, including from a comparative perspective. He holds degrees in law from the Universities of Munich (2020) and Reading (LL.M., 2021).

Clemens Spirkel is a student research assistant at the Chair of European and International Information Law and a second-year law student at the University of Passau.

Abstract

This publication visualises the current state of data protection laws and conventions around the world on a continent-by-continent basis. It not only encompasses laws that have passed and which are enforced in their respective jurisdiction, but also makes references to ongoing bills and legislative projects.

Foreword

Dear Fellow Reader,

In the last decade, the data protection law reform in Europe gained steam through a legislative proposal that would ultimately become the European Union General Protection Regulation (GDPR). A decade later, the number of jurisdictions around the world to enact comprehensive data protection legislation has almost doubled. Whereas the European Union's first-mover advantage induced by the GDPR has undoubtedly contributed to this increase in legislative activity, it is arguably starting to fade as laws from key geopolitical actors appear, most notably China and the United States. And yet, the 'Brussels Effect' (Bradford) continues to exert substantial influence upon lawmakers choosing to emulate the GDPR regulatory architecture, not least in the Global South.

Organised into continents and topics, the selection of maps gathered here aims to visualise broadly and to provide a convenient gateway for further research into the ongoing competition of data protection frameworks worldwide. By linking to active data protection bills and statutes of more than 100 countries as well as over 20 territories (with English translations, where available), we hope to offer some assistance in the time-consuming task of locating the relevant law(s). To account for developments from July 2022 onwards, this legislative survey is complemented by a regularly updated and expanded interactive world map which can be found at <https://datalaw.uni-passau.de>. A second focus of the project consists in pointing out instruments of international convergence in the field of data protection law, for instance by tracking the progress of modernising Council of Europe Convention 108. Beyond these select few issues, we cannot nor do we intend to replicate the efforts and research tools already in existence for the vast field that is global privacy and data protection (a non-exhaustive list of which is given below). Subsequent instalments of the project will deal with more topical aspects, namely with data (subject) rights and with the emerging regulation of various facets of the data economy.

We are more than happy to hear your thoughts about the maps in general and about what we have missed – and warmly welcome recommendations in order to close gaps, adjust for our (inevitably) European perspective, and to correct us! Please drop us an e-mail to moritz.hennemann@uni-passau.de and / or gregor.lienemann@uni-passau.de.

The maps are a result of team spirit and effort. We like to profoundly thank Anas al-Qudah, Patricia Boshe, Maylin Fidler, and Sofija Rašić for adding their invaluable expertise to the project and for taking responsibilities on individual maps. Moreover, we extend our gratitude to the entire team at the Research Centre for Law and Digitalisation (FREDI), first and foremost to our student research assistant Matthias Biller, for extremely helpful support in preparing and revising parts of the project.

Sincerely yours,
Moritz Hennemann, Gregor Lienemann, and Clemens Spirkel

L05.1 Data Protection Laws in Canada - federal

Canada has had comprehensive privacy legislation for more than two decades. Whilst the Privacy Act is directed at government entities, the Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act (PIPEDA) concerns the activities of private business.

Official designation of the law	Short title / abbreviation	Law officially adopted	Enforcement commenced	Competent Authority
Bill C-27 * An Act to enact the Consumer Privacy Protection Act, the Personal Information and Data Protection Tribunal Act and the Artificial Intelligence and Data Act and to make consequential and related amendments to other Acts	CPPA	- (read for the first time on 16 June 2022)	-	-
Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act (S.C. 2000, c. 5)	PIPEDA	13 April 2000	1 Januar 2004	Office of the Privacy Commissioner of Canada
Privacy Act (R.S.C., 1985, c. P-21)	Privacy Act	1 July 1983	1 July 1983	Office of the Privacy Commissioner of Canada

*Note that the legislative project known as Bill C-11, which would have enacted the Consumer Privacy Protection Act, died with the dissolution of the Canadian Parliament in August 2021.¹ Crucially, it was replaced by the current legislature with Bill C-27.

L05.1 Data Protection Laws in the United States - federal

The United States famously lacks a comprehensive privacy and data protection law at federal level. Instead, a patchwork of sector-specific provisions (mostly overseen by the Federal Trade Commission) control how personal information of U.S. citizens may be processed.

Despite an abundance of bills on the subject, it is only through current legislative efforts such as the Uniform Law Commission's Personal Data Protection Act and the American Data Privacy and Protection Act (the latter of which has been approved in committee and is now likely to face a vote in the House of Representatives¹) that the tide might eventually be turning in favour of a comprehensive approach towards data protection.

Official designation of the law	Short title / abbreviation	Sector regulated	Law officially adopted	Enforcement commenced	Competent authority
American Data Privacy and Protection Act (H.R.8152)	ADPPA	omnibus	- (bill introduced on 3 June 2022)	-	Federal Trade Commission
Privacy Act of 1974 5 U.S.C. § 552a	-	public	31 December 1974	27 September 1975	Office of Management and Budget (issuing memoranda)
Stored Communications Act 18 U.S.C. §§ 2701-2712	SCA	public	21 October 1986	21 October 1986
Fair Credit Reporting Act 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681-1681x	FCRA	credit agencies	26 October 1970	25 April 1971	Federal Trade Commission (rulemaking powers held by Consumer Financial Protection Bureau)
Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act Pub.L. 104-191	HIPAA	healthcare	21 August 1996	14 April 2001 (Privacy Rule) ²	Office for Civil Rights within the Department of Health & Human Services
Children's Online Privacy Protection Act 15 U.S.C. §§ 6501-6506	COPPA	protection of minors	21 October 1998	21 April 2000 (as per COPPA Rule) ³	Federal Trade Commission

L05.2 Comprehensive data protection laws in the United States - state level

Omnibus data protection legislation has been signed into law in 5 states as of August 2022. Given that more than half of all state legislatures have privacy bills on their agenda⁴, other states could soon follow suit. At this juncture, California remains the only state where enforcement action under the new law has been carried out and where a dedicated data protection agency (CPPA) has been set up.

All 50 states have enacted data breach notification law that oblige private companies as well as government entities to disclose security breaches of IT infrastructure holding personal information in a manner akin to Art. 33, 34 GDPR (which they largely pre-date).⁵

U.S. State	Official designation of the law	Law passed	Effective date	DPA established	Regulations issued
California	1. California Consumer Privacy Act of 2018 – Assembly Bill No. 375 (Cal. Civ. Code §§ 1798.100–1798.199.100) 2. California Privacy Rights Act (Proposition 24)	1. 28 June 2018 2. 3 November 2020	1. 1 January 2020 2. 1 January 2023	yes (California Privacy Protection Agency)	yes (Cal. Code of Regulations §§ 7000-7102)
Colorado	Colorado Privacy Act – Senate Bill 21-190 (C.R.S. §§ 6-1-1301 – 6-1-1313)	8 July 2021	1 July 2023	no (Office of the Attorney General)	no
Connecticut	An Act Concerning Personal Data Privacy and Online Monitoring - Public Act No. 22-15	10 May 2022	1 July 2023	no (Office of the Attorney General)	no
Utah	Consumer Privacy Act - Senate Bill 227 (Utah Code §§ 13-61-101 – 13-61-404)	24 March 2022	31 December 2023	no (Office of the Attorney General)	no
Virginia	Virginia Consumer Data Protection Act – Senate Bill 1392 (Va. Code §§ 59.1-575 – 59.1-585)	2 March 2021	1 January 2023	no (Office of the Attorney General)	no

L06 | Data Protection Laws in the Middle East

Over the past few months, the statutory landscape in the Middle East as regards data protection has evolved considerably, with the two largest economies in the region (Saudi Arabia and UAE) passing laws on the matter. By and large, they reflect the regulatory model pioneered by the GDPR in the European Union. As of this writing, both pieces of legislation are expected to become operational within a year's time.

The most recent legislative developments emanate from Israel, Jordan, and Oman. Whereas the former two nations introduced long-awaited bills into parliament, the latter enacted into law a Personal Data Protection Law in February 2022.

List of Data Protection Laws in the South Pacific

While nearly all South Pacific nations continue to lack a discrete statutory framework on data protection, some jurisdictions address privacy issues within a law against cybercrime. At present, anti-cybercrime legislation is found in Australia (2001), Fiji (2021), Kiribati (2021), Nauru (2015), New Zealand (2015), Papua New Guinea (2016), Vanuatu (2021), and Tonga (2003).

State	Official designation of the law	Translation / short title	Law officially adopted	DPA established (name)	Enforcement commenced

² Further, see the sectoral Consumer Data Right set forth in Part IV.D. of the Competition and Consumer Act 2010.

³ Prior to 2010, the Australian privacy regulator was known as the Office of the Privacy Commissioner (OPC), which in turn had been integrated into the Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission until 2000.

List of Existing Data Protection Laws in the Western Balkans

Kosovo, North Macedonia and Serbia have recently adopted new data protection laws which are modeled after the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR). Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina and Montenegro have not aligned their existing data protection laws with the GDPR yet, but new laws are expected to be adopted. This prospect is due to the fact that WB states are on the path to EU membership, their accession being conditional on the alignment of legislation to the acquis communautaire.

List of Adequacy Decisions by the European Commission

Replacing Article 25(6) of the 1995 Data Protection Directive (DPD), the GDPR in its Article 45(2) spells out non-exhaustive criteria from which an adequate level of data protection may be deduced by the Commission. The criteria are mirrored, albeit for different purposes, by Article 36 of the Law Enforcement Directive (LED). On these legal grounds, adequacy decisions have been adopted for the following countries (autonomous territories not marked in bold):

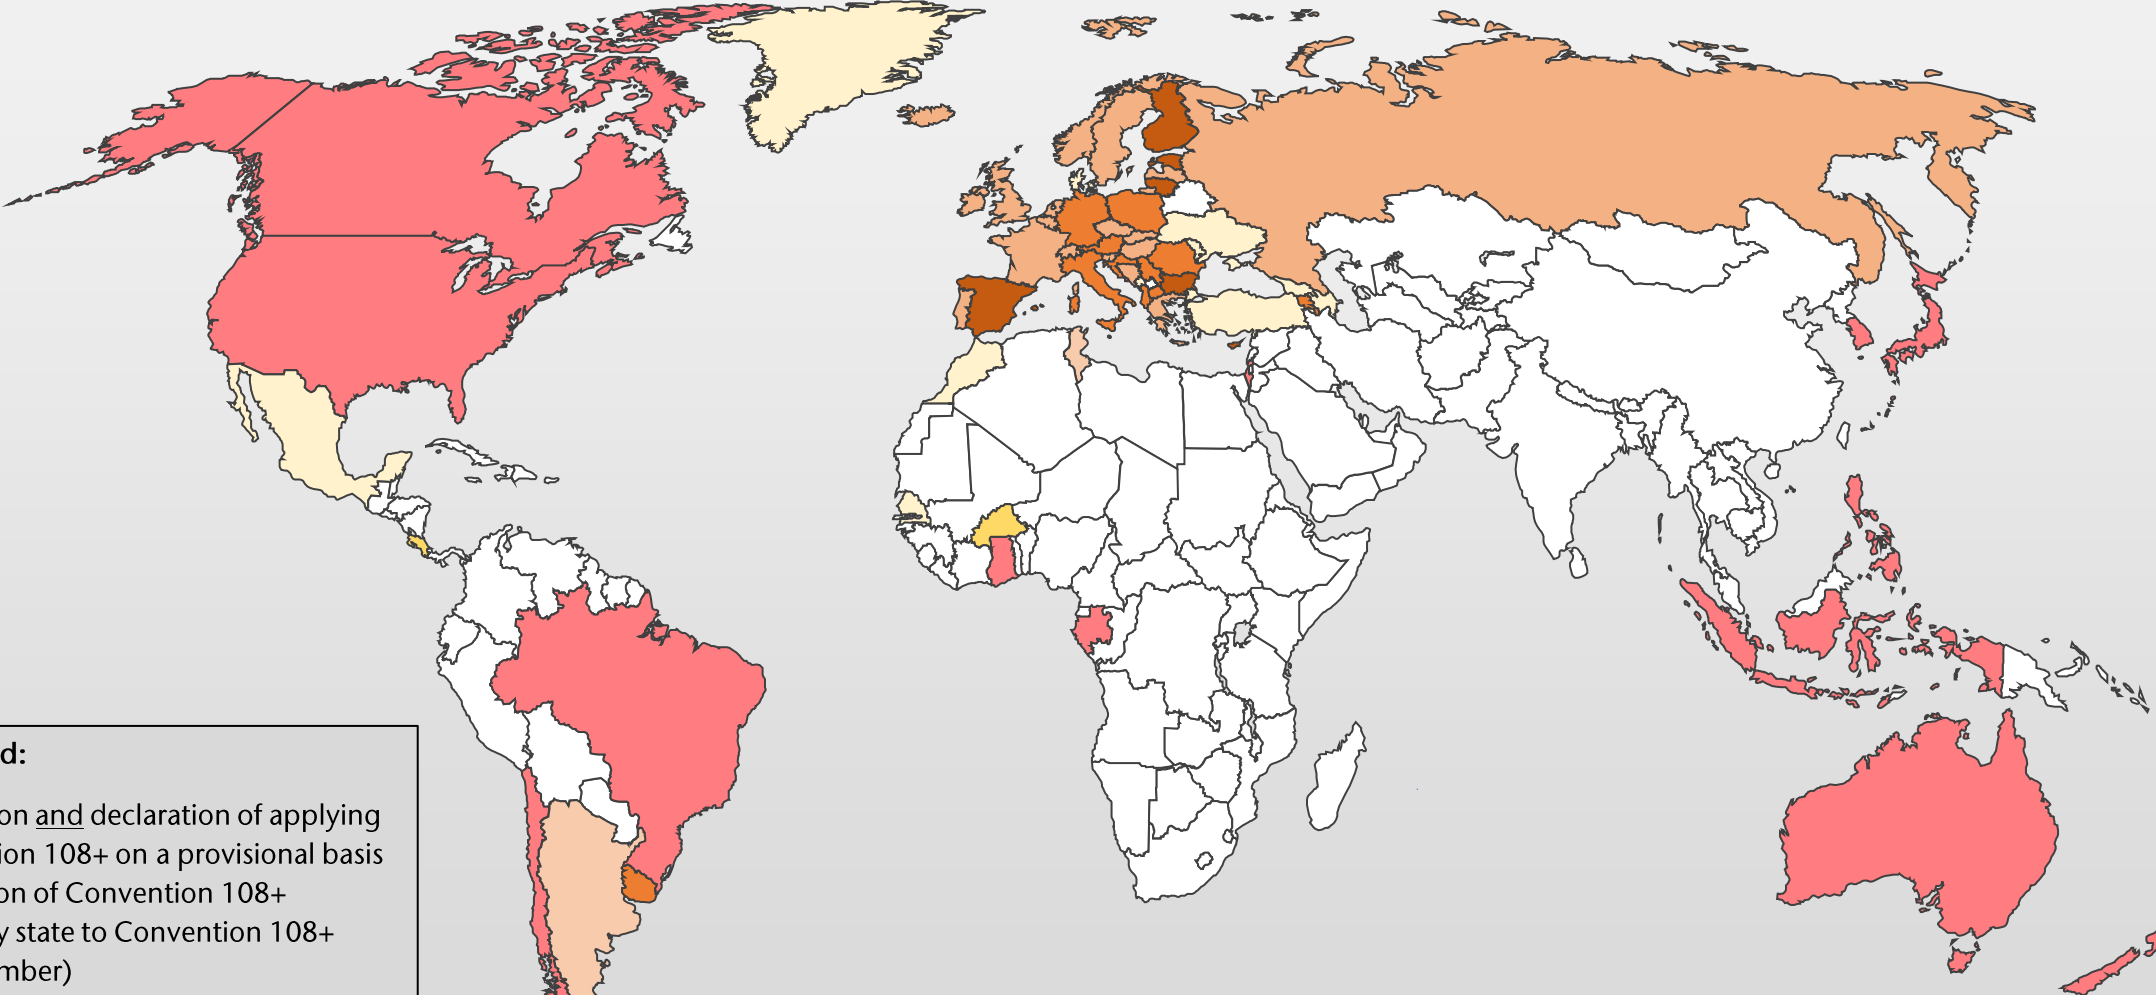

Andorra	Commission Decision of 19 October 2010 (2010/625/EU)
Argentina	Commission Decision of 30 June 2003 (2003/490/EC)
Canada	Commission Decision of 20 December 2001 (2002/2/EC)
Faroe Islands	Commission Decision of 5 March 2010 (2010/146/EU)
Guernsey	Commission Decision of 21 November 2003 (2003/821/EC)
Isle of Man	Commission Decision of 28 April 2004 (2004/411/EC)
Israel	Commission Decision of 31 January 2011 (2011/61/EU)
Japan	Commission Implementing Decision of 23 January 2019 ((EU) 2019/419)
Jersey	Commission Decision of 8 May 2008 (2008/393/EC)
Republic of Korea	Commission Implementing Decision of 17 December 2021 (C(2021) 9316 final)
New Zealand	Commission Implementing Decision of 19 December 2012 (2013/65/EU)
Switzerland	Commission Decision of 26 July 2000 (2000/518/EC)
United Kingdom	Commission Implementing Decision of 28 June 2021 (C(2021) 4800 final) Commission Implementing Decision of 28 June 2021 (C(2021) 4801 final)
Uruguay	Commission Implementing Decision of 21 August 2012 (2012/484/EU)

Progress en route to commencement of Modernised Convention 108 (“Convention 108+”)

Meeting for its 128th Session in Elsinore (Denmark) on 17 and 18 May 2018, the Council of Europe’s Committee of Ministers agreed to amend the 1981 Convention for the Protection of Individuals with regard to Automatic Processing of Personal Data (“Convention 108”) in light of new challenges having arisen in the field. The resulting Modernised Convention 108 (“Convention 108+”) is an expanded framework on the rights and obligations when processing personal data, as well as on the functional (co-) operation of supervisory authorities. It has been open for signature from 10 October 2018.

For Convention 108+ to enter into force, the underlying Amending Protocol (Treaty 223) mandates that one of two scenarios occur:

- All parties to the original Convention 108 have ratified the new treaty (Article 37(1) of the Protocol).
- Failing that, Convention 108+ becomes effective on 11 October 2023 if the treaty has been ratified by a minimum of 38 parties (Article 37(2) of the Protocol). To date, 19 states have signed and subsequently ratified the treaty (see below).

I03 | Parties to the Malabo Convention

The African Union Convention on Cyber Security and Data Protection was adopted on 27 June 2014 in the capital of Equatorial Guinea, Malabo. It is therefore also known as the Malabo Convention.

The Convention aggregates rules on electronic transactions, data protection, and cyber security. According to the Preamble, the chapter devoted to data protection serves to harmonise legislative frameworks within the African Union, protect privacy and promote free movement of information.

Substance-wise, the regulatory regime somewhat bears the marks of the 1995 EU Data Protection Directive, albeit with key differences (among which provisos for local communities, the categories of sensitive personal data, and the absence of notification and accountability procedures in case of data breaches stand out).

More recently, a review of the Malabo Convention was initiated in order to expedite the process of ratification, with expert consultants to submit their amendments by September 2022.
